

Tesco announced that for its Central European markets – Czech Republic, Poland, Hungary and Slovakia – they will establish a business service center in Budapest.

The Business Service Center (BSC), which opens in Budapest, at the Tesco office in Váci út, creates hundreds of new jobs in the Hungarian market. It is planned that the new service center will support administrative and analytical tasks in Central European business processes.

“We believe that in the region, Hungary provides the best opportunity to set up our BSC team, to develop our staff” – said Matt Simister, CEO of Tesco Central Europe.

In the new service center, Tesco is developing new jobs in three main areas: payroll and labor administration; product administration; customer service.
